Hands-On Honor and Support

Nurses dedicate their lives to caring for others. At the end of life, it's essential to return that care and thank them for their unwavering commitment to the community.

Samaritan presents an updated version of The Nightingale Tribute, a moving appreciation of our nurse-hospice patients. The honor includes a reading, lighting of a candle, and the gift of a white rose — a symbol of honor and gratitude for a caring heart.

Recently, 79-year-old Alicia Jonasz, surrounded by her Samaritan hospice team, was recognized for three decades of nursing care.

What is inpatient hospice care?

The opening of The Samaritan Center at Voorhees has prompted many people to ask when is the inpatient level of hospice care most appropriate and how it differs from in-home hospice care.

IN-HOME HOSPICE CARE

Hospice in any setting is the leading choice for comfort care for people with advanced illness. This care is most often provided where a person lives (home, assisted-living or nursing home community) when a physician feels that life expectancy is six months or less if the illness follows its normal course.

INPATIENT HOSPICE CARE

Sometimes, severe pain or other symptoms require an advanced level of round-the-clock care that is more effectively provided during a short stay in an inpatient hospice setting.

The goal is to bring severe pain and other symptoms under control so that a person, if possible, can return home to family.

Questions? Please call Samaritan at (800) 229-8183 and speak with our hospice nurses directly about your loved one's needs.

Celebration of Life by William Butler was painted at Samaritan's 2015 Gala and auctioned to 15 friends of Samaritan. They generously donated it back with the wish that it be installed at the new Samaritan Center at Voorhees to inspire patients, families, and staff there.

HELPING HANDS

Hospice Enables Great-Grandmother to Live with Grateful Family

Anna Torres was at a crossroads last summer. The cheerful 80-year-old was hospitalized with severe medical challenges that required difficult decisions about her future. But thanks to extensive support from Samaritan, Anna is now living comfortably with close relatives, enjoying each day with family and friends.

Although disabled by a major stroke and unable to walk for the past 20 years, Anna has remained a "joyous, happy person," notes daughter Marie Ann Stewart.

Then last June, the great-grandmother could no longer swallow food safely – without some of it passing into her lungs. The family prepared to watch their beloved mother spend her remaining days in hospital rooms.

"In late fall, someone suggested hospice," recalls Marie Ann, "but I thought that was when they send people to die."

She and her family soon learned the truth: that hospice is really about how best to live with a serious or terminal condition.

A Samaritan team member met with the family in Anna's hospital room, and immediately began connecting them with the supports they would need to care for Anna safely in the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Pete and Nora Torres.

Samaritan aides visit the Torres's home to bathe and dress Anna, transfer her from bed to chair, change her bed linens, bring healthcare supplies, and enable Nora to take breaks from caregiving. A Samaritan nurse visits regularly to check Anna's health and wellbeing. And volunteers are available to provide companionship by phone or in person.

"We appreciate the one-on-one personal care," says Marie Ann, the youngest of Anna's five children. "Mom loves the staff. They treat her with kindness and respect. But the most important thing to Mom is that she's in the comfort of home. That's been the best thing that's happened to her."

In addition, Samaritan has made life easier for Anna's caregivers and her other children, says Marie Ann. "There's great comfort in knowing their medical staff is just a phone call away."

A Prior Gift of the Heart

While Anna's family is presently caring for her at home, some patients may require brief periods of inpatient hospice care during their hospice journey due to severe pain or other symptoms.

Eleven months before Anna started receiving Samaritan's care, Marie Ann's financial advisor informed her about opportunities to support Samaritan's new inpatient center – The Samaritan Center at Voorhees.

Impressed with the center's peaceful, home-like setting for patients and their loved ones, she was moved to make a donation – dedicating one of the center's 18 patient rooms – to help ensure other families can receive Samaritan's inpatient level of services when they need them.

"I think it's a great program," says Marie Ann. "The more I learned about it, I felt compelled to assist. It's a great way to give back to the community."

And now, with her family's first-hand experience, Marie Ann can offer a very personal testimonial.

"We can't say enough about Samaritan," she states. "The staff is amazing; they make everyone feel so comfortable. My mom is very happy with the program!"

The Samaritan Center at Voorhees Open House & Dedication

Samaritan Healthcare & Hospice dedicated a vital community resource, South Jersey's first freestanding inpatient hospice center, on November 30, 2016, and began accepting patients Friday, December 16.

The dedication ceremony drew more than 150 area residents, healthcare professionals, Samaritan donors, and community leaders. Speakers included N.J. Department of Health Commissioner Cathleen Bennett, State Senator James Beach, and Voorhees Mayor Michael R. Mignogna. Cherry Hill resident Amy Garcia, whose mother and brother were cared for by Samaritan, also shared heartfelt remarks.

"This is truly a beautiful, peaceful place to be," said Commissioner Bennett, noting how the homelike surroundings convey "compassion and dignity."

Mayor Michael Mignogna proudly welcomed Samaritan to Route 73's Medical Mile.

Amy Garcia remarked about the at-home and inpatient hospice care her family has received.

Make a Gift with a Guaranteed Income for Life

The Charitable Gift Annuity (CGA) is a simple, irrevocable contract between a charity and a donor. The donor's gift earns a fixed income for their lifetime, and – upon their passing – leaves a remainder to the charity.

Annuity payments depend on the age of the donor and the value of the gift. Samaritan's CGA program subscribes to the American Council on Gift Annuities (ACGA) rates, and we can furnish an illustration without obligation, showing the annuity payment, as well as the eligible tax deduction.

CGAs are often created to cover two lifetimes, typically a donor and a spouse. A CGA can also be deferred, still earning a tax deduction at the time of the gift, while delaying the first annuity payment for a year or more. This may be advantageous for a younger donor.

Many donors consider their Samaritan CGA a part of their diversified investment portfolio. Considering the benefits of receiving fixed income annually for life, plus federal and possible state income tax deductions, you too may discover that supporting Samaritan with a CGA is a true win-win.

Of course, there are many other ways to give the gift of hospice, including a simple bequest in your will, or an outright donation of cash or appreciated stock. Other vehicles – charitable trusts, IRA rollovers, and gifts of life insurance – also offer donors flexibility and attractive options. As always, we recommend consulting your trusted professional financial advisor.
